RECALLS EXPERIENCES WITH N&W

52 Years Of Railroading Ending For A. V. Osborn

A career of railroading embracing more than a half century will be ended in Circleville this weekend.

A. V. Osborn, freight and passenger agent for the Norfolk and Western Railway in Circleville since 1923, will retire Sunday after devoting 52 years to the railroad service.

Osborn proudly puts it: "I was born in September, went to work in September and now I am going to leave in September."

The Circleville N and W agent, now 70, started to work as an operator for his railroad in 1899, working up to the post of agent in Ft. Gay, W. Va., in 1905.

Osborn was agent there for 23 years, leaving in 1928 to become freight and passenger agent in Circleville.

As agent in Circleville during the last 23 years, Osborn has served as supervisor for all N and W business in the city and surrounding territory, both passenger and freight service.

"I AM LEAVING my job with good spirits," Osborn said Saturday. "Although I hate to leave the people I have worked with and who have been so good to me."

Typifying the employee who has been with one business over more than 50 years, Osborn has seen many changes in railroading while serving the N and W system.

"When I started to work the railroads were just turning from the old link-and-pin couplers to the automatic couplers," Osborn said.

"They were still using hand brakes on the trains in those days, brakes which were uncertain and unsafe."

"And when I went to work it wasn't at all unusual to see a railroader carrying an empty sleeve as the result of coupling cars. It was a rough, dangerous job then."

Osborn explained that the N and W started an extensive safety first movement in 1910, however, which has developed in scope so as to make railroading one of the safest jobs in the nation. He said:

"IT USED TO be that accidents were very numerous, both on the road and in the repair shops, with limbs lost and blindness from unsafe machines."

"Since the safety first movement started, that has been cut down to a minimum so that now it is not unusual to operate for year after year without a fatal working accident."

Osborn also recalled that when he began as a railroader the single track system was in effect.

"The signal system then was by train orders, with one train laying up on a siding until another passed by."

"Also, they were held up because they were not permitted to follow too closely. Automatic signal systems have done away with all of that, and double tracks have increased the volume of traffic tremendously."

The veteran agent added that heavier equipment also has aided in stepping up the volume of business.

"When I started the rails weighed only about 60 pounds to the yard," Osborn recalled. "Now the rails are pretty standard at about 145 pounds to the yard."

"THE REST of the equipment has developed in the same proportion. Back then, a train with 25 or 30 cars was a large train. Now they sometimes are more than 100."

Osborn, his wife and family lived many years on East Main street in Circleville. The family has moved now and is located at 2215 Worthington street in Columbus.

The Osborns have eight children, five girls and three boys, most of whom attended school in Circleville.

Osborn said that he and his wife plan to be absent about a month following his retirement to visit a daughter in Denver, Colo., and then travel to California.

Fellow workers of the N and W system here Friday presented the retiring agent with a fine leather travelling case in a ceremony in the freight house.

As his last official act with the N and W, the Circleville veteran agent reported the appointment of his successor.

Named to replace Osborn as agent for the N and W in Circleville is L. G. Grace of Mt. Orab, who has been with the railroad about 15 years.

Grace is 33, is married and has three children. He is expected to arrive in Circleville this weekend to take over his new job.

Bradley, Ridgway Study Entire Korean Picture

TOKYO, Sept. 29 — Generals Omar N. Bradley and Matthew B. Ridgway conferred secretly in Tokyo today as Red China's radio charged that the Allies are planning an amphibious pincer drive into North Korea.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the United Nations supreme commander discussed what a terse official bulletin termed "military matters."

Presumably they talked about the ominous spread of Communist attacks on UN positions across the entire Korean front, as well as prospects of reviving the long-suspended armistice negotiations.

Hours after the Bradley-Ridgway huddle Radio Peiping declared that "the Americans" are mapping plans for amphibious landings on both the east and west coast of Communist North Korea.

THE ENGLISH-language broadcast asserted that this was the reason why the Allies are "creating delays" in the cease-fire talks.

Peiping added the charge that the U.S. 40th and 45th Divisions in Japan, along with American paratroopers, are "ready for action" in Korea.

Observers wondered whether the broadcast was intended to smokescreen Communist offensive preparations in Korea where the Reds have massed a half million frontline troops in their biggest buildup of the war.

Allied monitors meanwhile listened intently for any radioed Communist reply to Ridgway's proposal that the long-suspended truce conference be removed from Kaesong and renewed at the nearby no man's land village of Songhyn.

The Red high command remained silent on the matter more than 48 hours after Ridgway had made the proposal, but some UN military observers said a reply might be received Sunday—a favorite day for the Communist leaders to transmit messages.

Meanwhile, Allied forward positions were under Red probing pressure along the whole Korean front, but the enemy paid dearly for his mounting thrusts.

SHARP COMMUNIST attacks were thrown at United Nations lines for a second day Friday, portending a possible major offensive in the event the suspended armistice talks finally collapse.

On the central front the Reds succeeded momentarily in toppling UN defenders from a strategic height but were themselves knocked off the peak a few hours later. The enemy left 703 counted dead on the crest.

CRITICAL SHORTAGES CITED

More Material Slashes Facing Home-Builders

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—Top officials of two federal agencies are considering new cuts in home-building that are calculated to reduce housing production next year substantially below the announced goal of 850,000 dwelling units.

Plans are still in the very early stage of development, but there is little doubt that the government is on the verge of junking the 1952 housing program that was adopted during the summer.

Critical shortages of basic materials combined with widespread government fears of new inflationary pressures in early 1952 are forcing mobilization directors to the conclusion that home-building will have to be reduced.

A spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders says "we will fight such a proposition tooth and nail," arguing that housing is neither inflationary nor does it consume large amounts of scarce materials.

NEVERTHELESS, Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston has opened a campaign to persuade other officials the necessity of further general cutbacks in construction. The ESA director says:

"I don't think you can build 850,000 to one million homes next year, as an illustration, and still have ample materials for the defense effort without bringing a terrific pressure for increases in prices, black markets and so forth which we must try to avoid."

Moreover, Johnston declares that "commercial office buildings will have to be drastically retarded if not completely stopped except in very critical areas." He says controls can be ended in two years but rent regulations may have to continue longer.

Johnston's remarks came as a surprise to housing and home finance agency officials who are trying to keep home building at

British Appeal To World Panel

London Denies Blockade Set

TEHRAN, Sept. 29 — Deputy Premier Hussein Fatemi said today that Iran will stand firm on its decision to expel 350 British technicians from Abadan in the Anglo-Iranian oil dispute despite the British complaint to the UN Security Council.

Premier Mohammed Mossadegh will head the Iranian delegation to the UN hearing on the oil dispute despite "grave illness."

Fatemi said that Mossadegh made the decision because he felt that prompt decisions would be necessary.

The deputy premier said that "any time he receives a reasonable offer from the British he will try to come to an understanding."

The announcement followed a report that Mossadegh had refused a request by U.S. Ambassador Loy Henderson to withdraw Iran's order expelling the technicians from the country by next Thursday.

THE TWO MEN met in a two-hour conference last night. Later, Henderson presented his credentials to the Shah of Iran.

An American embassy spokesman denied that Henderson had conveyed a personal message from President Truman and said the U.S. envoy probably had informed the Shah on America's attitude towards the latest developments in the bitter oil nationalization fight.

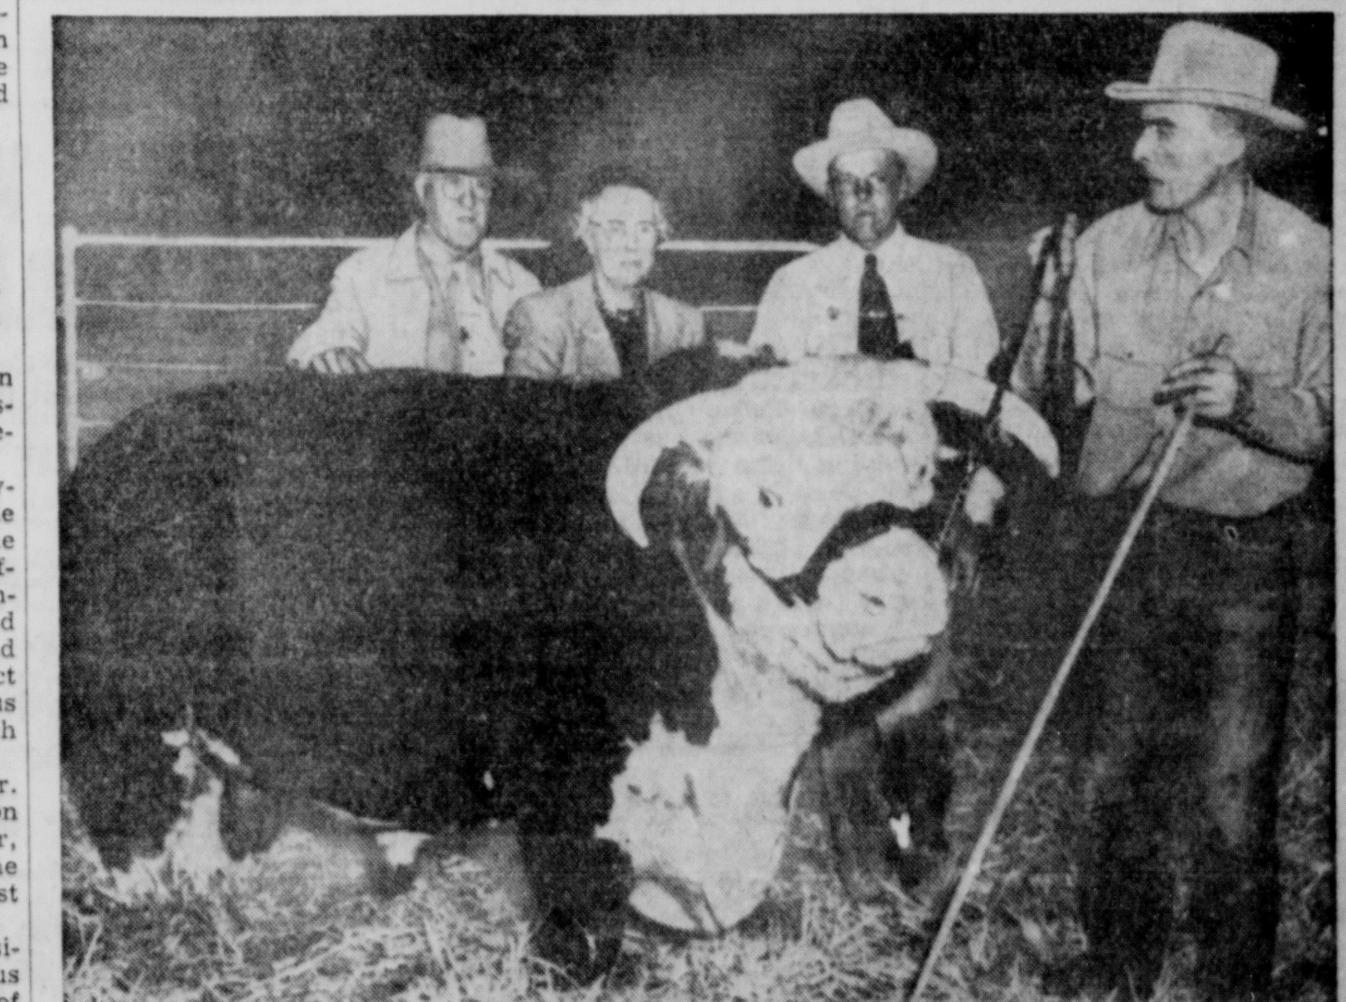

Meanwhile, Britain prepared to submit its dispute with Iran to the Security Council and denied it already had clamped a blockade on the Middle Eastern country.

The Foreign Office and Admiralty branded as "absolute nonsense" reports in London that warships had begun a blockade of the Persian Gulf to prevent any oil from leaving the world's largest refinery at Abadan.

The Admiralty said that Iran presently has only one small coastal tanker at Abadan and, therefore, it is not necessary for Britain to establish such a blockade.

The official announcement termed the critical situation "a matter likely to endanger peace."

Britain will ask the Security Council to issue a double-barreled demand on Iran: Comply with the Hague world court temporary injunction against nationalization and rescind the expulsion order against British technicians.

All Churchmen Urged To Unite Under One God

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—A call on religious faiths of the world to unite against the deceit and subversion, the military might and godlessness of Soviet Communism came today from President Truman.

The chief executive, in an address last night to the Washington Pilgrimage of American Churchmen, declared that "the very future of the word of God is in danger."

Mr. Truman said mankind faces a common peril from Communism and called on religious leaders of all faiths who believe "in the one God" to join "in a common affirmation of faith and a common supplication."

To Protestant churchmen meeting in National City Christian church, the President declared:

"Some time, I have been trying to bring a number of the great religious leaders of the world together in a common affirmation of faith and a common supplication to the one God that all profess. I have asked them to join in one common act which will affirm those religious and moral principles on which all agree."

White House sources said Mr. Truman referred to a mission on which he sent Myron Taylor, then special ambassador to the Vatican, to Europe in August 1947.

Taylor presented the President's proposal to Pope Pius and to religious leaders of France, England, Germany, Greece and Turkey. He asked that the leaders "support and contribute to a concert of all the forces striving for a moral world."

The Airforce said that UN troops in one area which had received 1,200 rounds of Red artillery and mortar fire Wednesday reported getting only four rounds Friday after Allied planes had pounded enemy positions.

Quarterly Data No Longer Is Needed By BUC

It will no longer be necessary for Pickaway County employers to submit detailed quarterly wage reports for each employee to the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

C. C. Thomas, local BUC manager, said the practice has been discontinued due to changes in the Ohio law.

He added that forms previously used for this purpose are not included with the contribution forms now being mailed to employers for the current calendar quarter, July 1-Sept. 30.

Formerly, Thomas said, the information contained in quarterly wage reports had been used to determine eligibility for unemployment benefits. On and after Jan. 1, 1952, when the amended law goes into effect, this information will be requested from the employer at the time his former employee files an application for benefits.

Such requests will require the employer to furnish wages and weeks worked by calendar quarters, and the reason for separation from employment.

Thomas further stated there had been no change in the method of making contribution reports, which must be completed and returned within the period stipulated by law. He said that complete information regarding the new method of wage reporting will be sent to all employers prior to Jan. 1, 1952.

Cleanup Time Found To Be Good Investment

Cleanup time around the farm can prevent personal injury, loss of time, or loss by fire.

And although many rural communities have already conducted cleanup campaigns, a few hours spent in putting things shipshape may save many days of time during the busy season later on. It is a well-known fact that orderly farms and homes have fewer accidents.

It will pay every farmer to take a few hours and remove accumulated papers, rags and rubbish from the home and farm buildings. Be sure that medicines, poisons and insecticides are out of the reach of children.

Many barns are still cluttered with an accumulation of things used during the winter. Clear them out of alley-ways or working areas so they can not cause accidents. A neat place is a safe place for either work or play

Atlanta Cage Team Promises Return Trip

Nine members of the senior class of Atlanta high school visited the state capital in Columbus Friday to see "first hand" how their state government operates.

The youngsters visited several state offices and made an extended tour through the office of State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson who explained the duties of the state auditor and then conducted them on a tour of his main offices in the State House.

They were shown how state warrants are written at the rate of 10,000 per day, how bookkeeping machines are operated to keep all state funds in balance, and the modern manner in which the state's financial system is conducted.

Ferguson held quite a discussion with members of the Atlanta basketball team who assured the state auditor they would be back in Columbus to play the state basketball tournament next year. Ferguson told the boys he would come down to Atlanta to see them play when the season starts.

The pupils were accompanied on their trip to Columbus by Mrs. M. Brigner.

Man Is Accused Of Purchasing Girl, 8, For $40

DETROIT, Sept. 29—A 42-year-old Hamtramck, Mich., peddler has been arrested under the federal white slave law on charges of buying a seven-year-old Tennessee girl for $40 eight years ago.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment naming Texas-born Ellis Sims.

The government charged that Sims and his wife went to Centerville, Tenn., eight years ago and arranged the $40 purchase of the youngster. The girl, now in her teens, was described as being ill and her family poverty-stricken at the time of the alleged purchase.

A morals charge was brought against Sims last year, but was dropped in circuit court for lack of proof.

Mrs. Sims filed divorce proceedings naming the girl as Miss X, but has accepted the teen-ager as a foster-daughter and is still living with her in Hamtramck.

Orient Man, 26, Seriously Hurt In Freak Mishap

A 26-year-old Orient Route 1 man was seriously injured Friday evening in a two-car freak accident at the junction of Routes 62 and 762 near Harrisburg.

The accident took place when a car driven by Dwight L. Cathel, westbound on Route 762, crossed Route 62 in the path of another auto operated by William J. Carlton Jr., 20, of Wooster.

State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells said the Cathel auto was hit broadside, spinning it around and sending it backwards into the yard of the Darby Tavern.

The auto collided with a steel pole and the impact caused the trunk door of the auto to fly open, sending contents flying.

Two windows in the front of the tavern, one 15 by 21 inches, the other 50 by 72 inches, were smashed by flying tools.

A spare wheel landed on the top of a parked auto owned by Urshel L. Hannah of Columbus, smashing the top down about six inches.

The wheel then rolled across the road and came to a stop in a yard.

Meanwhile the auto driven by Carlton rolled on through the intersection and halted in the tavern yard near the Cathel vehicle.

Cathel was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, where attaches reported he was suffering from a skull fracture, brain concussion and head lacerations. The man was unconscious for three hours.

Also injured was Carlton, suffering from lacerations; and two passengers in his car, Robert Sherwood, 22, of Willoughby, and Russell Snyder, 21, of Gratiot, both suffering minor injuries.

The three men in the Carlton car are soldiers, stationed in Ft. Knox, Ky.

Injunction Halts JP Hearing Of Church Dispute

A temporary injunction to prevent Magistrate Oscar Root from hearing a case for forcible entry and detention against a Williamsport minister has been granted by Judge William D. Radcliff in Pickaway County common pleas court.

Petition seeking the injunction was filed by the Rev. Fred A. Immelt, minister of Christian church of Williamsport.

Named as defendants in the case are Norman Leist, Floyd J. Cox, J. L. Leist and Root. Floyd Cox and J. L. Leist are trustees of the church.

Immelt claims he was awarded a contract to serve as minister on Sept. 9, and that on Sept. 18 he received a registered letter purporting to dispense with his services and signed by Cox and the two Leists.

The petition further states that the minister was served with a summons on Sept. 26 in a forcible entry and detention (residence in the parsonage) with a claim for rent action and ordering him to appear before Root at 3 p. m. Friday.

The injunction was granted by Judge Radcliff and served during the hearing in Root's court. The restraining order also enjoins the defendants from interfering with Immelt during the performance of his duties as minister of the church.

Atlanta Cage Team Promises Return Trip

Nine members of the senior class of Atlanta high school visited the state capital in Columbus Friday to see "first hand" how their state government operates.

The youngsters visited several state offices and made an extended tour through the office of State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson who explained the duties of the state auditor and then conducted them on a tour of his main offices in the State House.

They were shown how state warrants are written at the rate of 10,000 per day, how bookkeeping machines are operated to keep all state funds in balance, and the modern manner in which the state's financial system is conducted.

Ferguson held quite a discussion with members of the Atlanta basketball team who assured the state auditor they would be back in Columbus to play the state basketball tournament next year. Ferguson told the boys he would come down to Atlanta to see them play when the season starts.

The pupils were accompanied on their trip to Columbus by Mrs. M. Brigner.

Man Is Accused Of Purchasing Girl, 8, For $40

DETROIT, Sept. 29—A 42-year-old Hamtramck, Mich., peddler has been arrested under the federal white slave law on charges of buying a seven-year-old Tennessee girl for $40 eight years ago.

A federal grand jury returned the indictment naming Texas-born Ellis Sims. The government charged that Sims and his wife went to Centerville, Tenn., eight years ago and arranged the $40 purchase of the youngster. The girl, now in her teens, was described as being ill and her family poverty-stricken at the time of the alleged purchase.

A morals charge was brought against Sims last year, but was dropped in circuit court for lack of proof.

Mrs. Sims filed divorce proceedings naming the girl as Miss X, but has accepted the teen-ager as a foster-daughter and is still living with her in Hamtramck.

Orient Man, 26, Seriously Hurt In Freak Mishap

A 26-year-old Orient Route 1 man was seriously injured Friday evening in a two-car freak accident at the junction of Routes 62 and 762 near Harrisburg.

The accident took place when a car driven by Dwight L. Cathel, westbound on Route 762, crossed Route 62 in the path of another auto operated by William J. Carlton Jr., 20, of Wooster.

State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells said the Cathel auto was hit broadside, spinning it around and sending it backwards into the yard of the Darby Tavern.

The auto collided with a steel pole and the impact caused the trunk door of the auto to fly open, sending contents flying.

Two windows in the front of the tavern, one 15 by 21 inches, the other 50 by 72 inches, were smashed by flying tools.

A spare wheel landed on the top of a parked auto owned by Urshel L. Hannah of Columbus, smashing the top down about six inches.

The wheel then rolled across the road and came to a stop in a yard.

Meanwhile the auto driven by Carlton rolled on through the intersection and halted in the tavern yard near the Cathel vehicle.

Cathel was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, where attaches reported he was suffering from a skull fracture, brain concussion and head lacerations. The man was unconscious for three hours.

Also injured was Carlton, suffering chin lacerations; and two passengers in his car, Robert Sherwood, 22, of Willoughby, and Russell Snyder, 21, of Gratiot, both suffering minor injuries.

The three men in the Carlton car are soldiers, stationed in Ft. Knox, Ky.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

Some of the geniuses of the world were noted for their wool-gathering at school. Of course, they exercised powerful concentration of attention upon matters which captured their interest, though they often failed to concentrate on what the teacher expected them to concentrate.

On the other hand, most of the world's geniuses had good habits of concentration in conformity with the things at hand.

There hardly is proof that good habits of concentration in the child and reasonable conformity by him will hinder him from realizing his greatest intellectual capacities.

Let no youth who often dwells on fantasies of romance and adventure for a whole class period, scarcely hearing a thing said in his presence, suppose he is a genius. The quality of his wool-gathering is better when it has unity and cohesion than when his mind flits leisurely and aimlessly from one thing to another. Perhaps any daydreaming that has a central core and holds together for some while is quite superior to ideas that toss about like chips on waves of water.

Some highly-excitable and nervous children seem especially prone to scatter-brainedness. To expose any youngster to too much stimulation can hinder good concentration habits in him.

EVEN TOO MANY toys at a time can do so. (My bulletin, "The Child Who Doesn't Concentrate," may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

Beginning with the baby, we can cultivate good concentration habits in him as we provide him with a family atmosphere of considerable serenity and encourage him in enjoyments in which he is not stimulated to shift his attention unduly often. When at the age of several months he enjoys chewing, examining and manipulating a single object in his hand for longer and longer periods at a stretch, he is having pretty good practice in concentration habits; so, also, when he later builds for longer periods with his blocks, when he looks at pictures longer and longer while you talk to him about them and finally read about them.

As I have said before in this column, about the best training in concentration habits for immediate and future use is reading to the very young child and continuing to do so long past the time when he enters school.

Suppose the teacher reports that your child does not concentrate at school. Don't exhort this child to pay better attention at school. Working with his teacher, do your utmost to help him enjoy more successes at his books. The better a child can read or spell, for instance, the better he will concentrate at learning in these subjects.

Train him at home in reasonable, adequate restraints. The youngster always rushing headlong, doing always as he pleases, has poor education for good concentration habits. Hold him to essential routines.

Before you request or command him to do something, be sure you first have his attention. Then see that he promptly carries the matter through. The older child, especially in high school, might be led to see how he can discipline himself by making himself pay strict attention in the classroom and thus save himself a lot of needless work elsewhere.

Answering Parents' Questions

Q. A certain difficult behavior in one of our children, said he is suffering from jealousy. We can't understand this as we always have tried hard to treat both the children alike and to give one as much love as the other.

A. His suggesting jealousy is no reflection on the efforts of you parents. No matter how hard you have tried, this child may still feel sure he is not loved by you as much as the other child; and what he believes is so for him. Strive still harder that he may have more reasons to see that he does stand as well in the family circle as the other child.

Nazarene Rites Are Announced

"Holiness in the Book of Ephesians" is the sermon topic to be delivered by the Rev. Doyle Clay during worship service Sunday in Church of the Nazarene.

Sunday school will begin at 9:30 a. m. under the direction of Jack Mumaw. Lesson topic will be "Go Ye Into All the World."

Featured in the worship service will be the adult choir, which will sing "Holiness Forever More."

Young people of the church will meet at 6:45 p. m. with Marjorie Allen directing. Evening service will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Pilgrim Church Books Service

Pilgrim Holiness church will observe "Rally Day" Sunday during Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.

Lesson topic will be presented by the Rev. Alonzo Hill during the special Sunday school program, and special music will be presented by Lewis Brebard of the Mt. of Praise Bible School.

Enlarging the Christian Fellowship

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Isaiah 60:1-3; Acts 14:8; 8:4-5, 26-29, 35-38; Romans 14:29.

Forty days after His resurrection, Jesus was with His disciples, and He told them not to leave Jerusalem, but to "wait for the promise of the Father," the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Following the martyrdom of Stephen and the persecutions that followed, the disciples were scattered abroad, but everywhere they went they preached the gospel, Philip going to Samaria.

Traveling as the Lord bade him, Philip encountered a eunuch of great importance, in the employ of the queen of Ethiopia, sitting in his chariot reading scripture. God told Philip to join him.

A woman of Joppa, known for her good works, died, and hearing that Peter was not far away, he was sent for and brought her back to life.

Following the dinner, at the evening services the local councils over the state will present silver anniversary gifts to the state finance committee, Mrs. Ralph Holland will again address the group on "Today's Imperative". She is the wife of Dr. Ralph L. Holland, general secretary of the Indiana Council of Churches.

Also on Tuesday evening, Mrs. Cecelia Tilley Kline of Columbus will present the foreign mission study for 1951-52, speaking on the theme, "Latin America Challenges You". U. S. BORDER GUARDS carefully watch a Czech private and a staff officer before turning them over to Czechoslovakian authorities in Frankfurt, Germany. Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

Some of the geniuses of the world were noted for their wool-gathering at school. Of course, they exercised powerful concentration of attention upon matters which captured their interest, though they often failed to concentrate on what the teacher expected them to concentrate.

On the other hand, most of the world's geniuses had good habits of concentration in conformity with the things at hand.

There hardly is proof that good habits of concentration in the child and reasonable conformity by him will hinder him from realizing his great intellectual capacities.

Let no youth who often dwells on fantasies of romance and adventure for a whole class period, scarcely hearing a thing said in his presence, suppose he is a genius. The quality of his wool-gathering is better when it has unity and cohesion than when his mind flits leisurely and aimlessly from one thing to another.

Perhaps any daydreaming that has a central core and holds together for some while is quite superior to ideas that toss about like chips on waves of water.

Some highly excitable and nervous children seem especially prone to scatter-brainedness. To expose any youngster to too much stimulation can hinder good concentration habits in him.

EVEN TOO MANY toys at a time can do so. (My bulletin, "The Child Who Doesn't Concentrate," may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

Beginning with the baby, we can cultivate good concentration habits in him as we provide him with a family atmosphere of considerable serenity and encourage him in enjoyments in which he is not stimulated to shift his attention unduly often. When at the age of several months he enjoys chewing, examining and manipulating a single object in his hand for longer and longer periods at a stretch, he is having pretty good practice in concentration habits; so, also, when he later builds for longer periods with his blocks, when he looks at pictures longer and longer while you talk to him about them and finally read about them.

As I have said before in this column, about the best training in concentration habits for immediate and future use is reading to the very young child and continuing to do so long past the time when he enters school.

Suppose the teacher reports that your child does not concentrate at school. Don't exhort this child to pay better attention at school. Working with his teacher, do your utmost to help him enjoy more successes at his books. The better a child can read or spell, for instance, the better he will concentrate at learning in these subjects.

Train him at home in reasonable, adequate restraints. The youngster always rushing headlong, doing always as he pleases, has poor education for good concentration habits. Hold him to essential routines.

Before you request or command him to do something, be sure you first have his attention. Then see that he promptly carries the matter through. The older child, especially in high school, might be led to see how he can discipline himself by making himself pay strict attention in the classroom and thus save himself a lot of needless work elsewhere.

Answering Parents' Questions
Q. A certain child specialist, explaining the difficult behaviorism in one of our children, said he is suffering from jealousy. We can't understand this as we always have tried hard to treat both the children alike and to give one as much love as the other.

A. His suggesting jealousy is no reflection on the efforts of you parents. No matter how hard you have tried, this child may still feel sure he is not loved by you as much as the other child; and what he believes is so for him. Strive still harder that he may have more reasons to see that he does stand as well in the family circle as the other child.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Isaiah 60:1-3; Acts 1:4-8; 8:4-5, 26-29, 35-38; Romans 14:29.

Forty days after His resurrection, Jesus was with His disciples, and He told them not to leave Jerusalem, but to "wait for the promise of the Father," the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Following the martyrdom of Stephen and the persecutions that followed, the disciples were scattered abroad, but everywhere they went they preached the gospel, Philip going to Samaria.

Traveling as the Lord bade him, Philip encountered a eunuch of great importance, in the employ of the queen of Ethiopia, sitting in his chariot reading scripture. God told Philip to join him.

A woman of Joppa, known for her good works, died, and hearing that Peter was not far away, he was sent for and brought her back to life. MEMORY VERSE—Romans 1:16.

SECRET WEAPONS

HINTS from official sources about American secret weapons have set off speculation that is increasing in tempo. The only tangible development the guessers have to go on is the disclosure that these weapons would be delivered against an enemy by air.

Among the guesses:

A chemical "nerve gas" which would cause temporary or permanent paralysis.

A toxic gas similar to known gases but much more potent in its effects on the respiratory system, blood stream and body tissues.

Devices that would use ultra - high-frequency sound waves or electro-magnetic waves to generate heat in matter at great distances and cause it to disintegrate.

Devices that would in some manner focus the heat of the sun for purposes of destruction.

One new development is no longer secret. A contract has been let, to build an atom-powered submarine. And now a California company is building an atom-powered airplane. Plane and submarines so powered, if successful, could go to any part of the world and back without refueling.

During World War II Germany had opponents on tenterhooks about new weapons. This time the United States is in the forefront. Russia's only announced contributions so far is that it has a secret weapon that will "move mountains."

TAX SATURATION

IN THE NEW tax bill the federal liquor tax is increased from its present $9 a barrel. But the government is having trouble with moonshining at the present tax level.

Based on the number of illicit stills captured in 1950, the Treasury's alcohol tax division estimates these stills would have produced $2 billion of federal taxes if they had been operated legally. This does not include the number of illicit stills that went undetected.

When prohibition was repealed the liquor tax was $2 a barrel and few illicit stills apparently were operated. But as the tax went higher still operators found they could undersell legal liquor. A further excise increase is expected to increase the efforts of those seeking to evade the law.

This is what the experts mean when they refer to tax ceilings and levying more than the trade will bear. That is becoming true not only in the case of liquor but in several other fields. The history of high taxes in all countries is that efforts at evasion increase.

Will Americans be different than other peoples in that regard?

It's high time to develop highway manners when driving an automobile.

Delayed Economic Punch Brings Headaches Aplenty

Impact of Mobilization To Be Felt This Winter

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The delayed economic punch that is part of the country's war mobilization is providing plenty of headaches for Pentagon planners when they try to look beyond the present armistice negotiations.

The real impact of the industrial mobilization won't be felt until this winter, and it looks now as though that will be long after the specific war that touched it off.

Here are some of the reasons: Before Korea, the Air Force was buying planes at a rate of 1.5 billion dollars a year. This was stepped up to 7 billion for the current year and 11.1 billion for the coming fiscal year. But it takes an average of 18 months to get a plane after it is ordered. So few of the '51 orders, and none of those scheduled for the current fiscal year, are yet in production.

Plane purchases are a fat fourth of the entire major procurement program.

The same thing is true of Army tanks. Many have been ordered, few produced. And the Navy's buildup is still largely on paper as far as industrial aspects are concerned. Congressional and defense leaders are more inclined to increase the tempo of the buildup than they are to slow down, and they think the United States public will go along. Whether Allies abroad will get worried and start leaning toward Moscow policy is the big question.

● GETTING LATE: The American jet engine industry is at least six months behind schedule. That is the estimate of Adm. DeWitt C. Ramsey, president of the Aircraft Industries Association. Ramsey recently noted in the association's official publication that materials

These Days

If the investigations into Communism are only to pillory individuals, to smash reputations, to gain political advantage, they have no valid purpose. Those who refer to them as "witch-hunting" would then be correct.

The purpose of the two congressional committees engaged in this work and of a small group of individuals who have devoted years to it is more profound. They are seeking the pattern of the use of our own sons and daughters by a foreign country to destroy the character and strength of our nation. Alger Hiss is in prison, but neither his trials nor all the studies of his case have produced an explanation of how a person of such background and education and opportunities for service could become a foreign agent.

Elizabeth Bentley, in her book "Out Of Bondage," gives us something of the pattern and it is therefore a valuable and interesting contribution to the subject. The point must be made that without such ex-Communists as Elizabeth Bentley, those who are studying this problem would still be groping in the realm of theory. Only insiders can tell us what really happened in their time.

The case of Louis Budenz is particularly important as he was in a key position to know most things that happened because he, as editor of the Daily Worker, had it as his job to give the line to other Communists, to indicate who was to be favored, who was to be attacked and smeared. For instance, while Budenz was editor of the Daily Worker, I was usually called a Japanese agent and spy, which was untrue, altogether without any basis, but nonetheless the Communist method of damaging my reputation.

Since Budenz has broken with the party, he has been of tremendous service to this country by testifying before courts and congressional committees and for the FBI. He has testified that during the last five years, he has devoted approximately 3,000 hours to the FBI alone.

He was the first witness at the trial of the 11 Communists in Judge Medina's court, on the stand 10 days, laying the foundation for that successful trial. His data stood up in the deportation proceedings against John Santo and J. Peters, leading Soviet espionage agents. He established the guilt of Gerhart Eisler. He exposed the International Workers Order and has now been testifying before the McCarran committee.

Thus far, Budenz's data, although often attacked, has never been defeated. It has been suggested that there has been a conflict between his testimony before the Tydings and the McCarran committees. This is not true. The Tydings committee was antagonistic to Budenz and would not question him adequately. In other words, a witness can only answer questions; if the questions are not asked, the answers cannot be forthcoming.

When Budenz was editor of the Daily Worker his major task was to inform the comrades and their stooges as to "the line." Every time the line twisted, it was his task to delineate the twist. He, himself, has defined the line as follows:

DIET AND HEALTH

Amino Acids Essential For Keeping Up Body's Proteins

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PROTEINS are essential to life. They are necessary not only for the structure of cells and tissues, but also for many of the body's processes and functions.

For instance, the enzymes, which regulate such processes as digestion, are composed of proteins. The same is true of the hormones which govern dozens of basic activities. Even the antibodies, or disease-resisting factors in the blood, are protein and the same substances play a major role in regulating the body's fluid balance. In addition, proteins are the body's only source of nitrogen, another essential for life.

Amino Acids

Now, while the human body can manufacture an almost endless variety of proteins, it can only do so when given an abundant supply of their constituent parts—the amino acids. These it cannot make; hence, the body must be furnished with them in the form of food.

Both animal and vegetable foods contain proteins, but they are not equally valuable because some of them contain only a few of the 10 amino acids which are indispensable to human life. The proteins found in eggs, milk, and meat are excellent in that they contain the full array of essential amino acids.

Premature Infant's Need

The premature infant's need for protein is especially pressing, since such babies are underdeveloped and must rapidly make good the deficiencies which exist at birth.

In a study made it was found that premature infants receiving a high protein diet which did not contain sufficient amounts of vitamin C or ascorbic acid had a specific slowness of growth, due to a lack of two of the essential amino acids. Premature infants fed a high protein diet not containing vitamin C excreted large amounts of the two essential amino acids in their urine. This caused slowness of growth and lack of normal development of the small infant.

ACTH Tried

It is sometimes difficult to give vitamin C in adequate amounts to premature infants. Therefore, other substances have been tried. It was found that ACTH, given in adequate dosage over a sufficient period of time, abolished the defect in the utilization of certain amino acids. However, ACTH had to be administered over a more prolonged period of time than vitamin C or ascorbic acid to counteract this difficulty.

It would be advisable to see that premature infants receive an adequate amount of vitamin C in order to maintain protein metabolism. If this is impossible, the use of ACTH should be considered.

Answer: This procedure is not advisable since it may cause repeated irritation of the skin, with the possible formation of a skin tumor.

shortages are causing considerable worry in the airplane industry. The Admiral referred to efforts of H. R. Boyer as chairman of the newly-created Aircraft Production Board to relieve the machine tool shortage, and declared: "The problems are enormous. Mr. Boyer estimates that jet engine manufacturers alone could use entire output of the nation's machine tool production capacity."

Ramsay estimated from Boyer's figures that even with maximum aid and incentives offered by government, deliveries of machine tools to the industry will not be significant for at least another 10 months.

● EXPLOITING A VICTORY—Look for the U. S. to make every effort to exploit the victory scored over Russia at the Japanese Peace treaty conference. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, in his recent Washington conferences with British Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, impressed upon them the fact that the free world now is well on the way toward winning the cold war.

It was made clear in the North Atlantic Foreign Ministers' Ottawa meeting that an increasingly tough attitude toward Russia can be adopted. Clear indication of the new policy has come in U. S. measures against the Czech Communist regime in General Matthew Ridgway's stern handling of the situation arising from the stalled truce talks in Korea, and in the decision to give West Germany virtual sovereignty.

Recent statements by President Truman and members of Congress about "fantastic" new U. S. weapons of awesome destructive power are viewed as part of the "get tough" program. Meanwhile, the Kremlin is showing signs of worry—reflected in part in reports that Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary may soon be taken into the Soviet Union.

● RIFLES—The big secret about the hurried Washington conference by defense heads from Britain, Canada and France has leaked out. The Big Four nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were in a dither over a new rifle that Britain announced it had developed.

Since one of the big objectives of the NATO is arms standardization, the other members wanted to see for themselves and to determine what effect it would have on the standardization program.

At it turned out, the new British rifle differs greatly from those generally in use in the U. S., Canada and France. But despite protests from these three nations, Britain apparently is determined to go ahead with its production.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"I WANT a drink!" Joan exclaimed as the game wore on toward its conclusion. "They're not going to score now, not possibly. Thirty yards and only three minutes. Come on, Ramsay, let's all get out of here ahead of the jam. I want a drink."

Anne, who had turned again to look at the field, cried ruefully, "Off side! Ten yards. It's a penalty. That referee stole the game from us—he absolutely stole it!"

"He absolutely did," agreed Ramsay, grunting to his feet and shaking down his coat. "Come along, gals. Mamma's getting her dander up."

"Aren't we going to wait for Tony?" Ellen asked faintly.

"After that massacre?" screamed Joan. "The coach will have those poor kids on the pan till midnight. Not a chance. Even Tony had lead in his pants today."

"Too hot. Too hot for football!" Ramsay stood aside to let the three of them pass. "Too bad, kids. I was hoping you'd see a real game."

"I had fun anyway," Anne blushed cheerfully. "I had a wonderful time."

"Don't kid the old man," teased Ramsay. "It was assault and battery from the first gun. They were too heavy—not a man of 'em under two hundred."

"They were fast, though," Anne insisted. "They were awfully fast to be so heavy."

"Alibi gal!" Ramsay held Ellen's arm going down the steep steps, with Joan and Anne skipping lightly ahead of them. "You must have put a hex on Tony, Ellen—he was dead on his feet today."

Yesterday Tony had been a hero, Ellen was thinking; today he was in the discard. They weren't even going to wait for him after all the plans they had made on Sunday.

Joan was raucously eager, once they were in the car. "The Greenbriar, Ramsay, and step on it! The place will be mobbed if we don't hurry."

"I'll drive, if you don't mind, my dear," Ramsay said frigidly. The Greenbriar Inn was a roaring bedlam inside. Off to the left Ellen saw a crowded bar. Joan headed for it immediately. "Get a table, Ramsay, and look after the kids," she ordered. "I'll be along."

As few of the guests were interested in eating yet, Ramsay found a table promptly, without excessive bribery, and pulled out chairs for Ellen and Anne with a gallant flourish. "We'll order first, then you two can go and powder your noses," he said. "The service is always slow here."

In the powder room Anne Blayde turned anxiously on Ellen. "I wish I hadn't come with them," she said unhappily. "My mother didn't want me to come. Are you in love with Tony Rico?" Joan said you were.

"My heavens!" Ellen turned from the mirror, lipstick in air. "I barely know Tony. I danced with him once in Florida, and he came to see me Sunday. Joan gets some very weird ideas."

"I didn't know," Anne ran a comb through her yellow stuff of hair. "Tony is the type girls always go mad over."

"We could slip out and take a taxi," Ellen suggested. "I can't be terribly late getting back—my mother's so sick and she worries."

"I didn't bring much money," Anne looked dubiously into her purse. "Only eighty cents. We could go on the bus but it's a long walk to the bus line."

"We'll tell them quite firmly that we must leave immediately after dinner," Ellen said in a tone faintly reminiscent of her mother.

"I don't think firmness goes very far with Joan Ighart."

Presently Anne was off, threading her way through the tables. Ellen saw the man get to his feet, very brown and tall, and stand smiling at her. Then the two came back, and Anne, a youthful excitement shining in her eyes, introduced him.

"This is my friend Jim Elliot, Miss Fowler, Jim, Elliot, Fowler."

Elliot bowed. "I've met your father, Miss Fowler. I'll be delighted to take you both back to town."

Ellen flushed. "It's... my mother is ill. Mr. Elliot... we came with the Igharts and they'll probably stay late."

"You don't have to explain. Jim knows Joan Ighart, Ellen. Were you going straight back to town anyway, Jim?"

"Straight back to town, Anne. Suppose I wait for you in my car outside, and when you've finished your dinner we'll go. Does that suit you, Miss Fowler?"

"You're awfully kind. Thank you so much."

Ramsay came back then, and his frown and shoulder shrug were more eloquent than words. "Glad you went ahead with your dinners," he said. Anne explained the plan for their return.

Jim Elliot drove slowly on their homeward way, and Anne was so happy that she leaned back and hummed a tune till Elliot said, "Sing it out, Anne." She tilted her head back and sang in a sweet, small, throaty voice, and Elliot joined in, missing some of the words but humming the tune.

At the Fowler house Elliot said good night and thanks and hurried to the door, declining Elliot's escort with a frigid little gesture. "Don't bother. Thanks again for bringing me home."

Anne rode homeward so happy that she was giddy and entirely detached from realities. I'm in love with him, she was thinking. I'm in love with him and somewhere he has a wife and I don't care at all. He doesn't care either, or he wouldn't be here, far away from her, never mentioning her name.

At Garden Hill she said impulsively, "Come along in, Jim. Dad always has some beer in the refrigerator." Then she remembered. "Oh, good gracious! I forgot—it's Mr. Gainer's refrigerator now. He bought it because it was built into the kitchen and it's too big for our old house. But maybe there's beer in it anyway."

She was a little dashed when Elliot said, "Thank you—not tonight, Anne. I've been out of the office all day. I haven't even read my mail."

Would there be a letter from her in that mail, from that wife he never spoke of? Anne shrugged off the troubling thought and kept her tone light. "Thank you anyway, for rescuing us."

SECRET WEAPONS

HINTS from official sources about American secret weapons have set off speculation that is increasing in tempo. The only tangible development the guessers have to go on is the disclosure that these weapons would be delivered against an enemy by air.

Among the guesses:
A chemical "nerve gas" which would cause temporary or permanent paralysis.

A toxic gas similar to known gases but much more potent in its effects on the respiratory system, blood stream and body tissues.

Devices that would use ultra - high-frequency sound waves or electro-magnetic waves to generate heat in matter at great distances and cause it to disintegrate.

Devices that would in some manner focus the heat of the sun for purposes of destruction.

One new development is no longer secret. A contract has been let to build an atom-powered submarine. And now a California company is building an atom-powered airplane. Plane and submarines so powered, if successful, could go to any part of the world and back without refueling.

During World War II Germany had opponents on tenterhooks about new weapons. This time the United States is in the forefront. Russia's only announced contributions so far is that it has a secret weapon that will "move mountains."

TAX SATURATION

IN THE NEW tax bill the federal liquor tax is increased from its present $9 a barrel. But the government is having trouble with moonshining at the present tax level.

Based on the number of illicit stills captured in 1950, the Treasury's alcohol tax division estimates these stills would have produced $2 billion of federal taxes if they had been operated legally. This does not include the number of illicit stills that went undetected.

When prohibition was repealed the liquor tax was $2 a barrel and few illicit stills apparently were operated. But as the tax went higher still operators found they could undersell legal liquor. A further excise increase is expected to increase the efforts of those seeking to evade the law.

This is what the experts mean when they refer to tax ceilings and levying more than the trade will bear. That is becoming true not only in the case of liquor but in several other fields. The history of high taxes in all countries is that efforts at evasion increase. Will Americans be different than other peoples in that regard?

MARCH OF EVENTS

Delayed Economic Punch Brings Headaches Aplenty Impact of Mobilization To Be Felt This Winter

WASHINGTON—The delayed economic punch that is part of the country's war mobilization is providing plenty of headaches for Pentagon planners when they try to look beyond the present armistice negotiations.

The real impact of the industrial mobilization won't be felt until this winter, and it looks now as though that would be long after the specific war that touched it off. Here are some of the reasons: Before Korea, the Air Force was buying planes at a rate of 1.5 billion dollars a year. This was stepped up to 7 billion for the current year and 11.1 billion for the coming fiscal year. But it takes an average of 18 months to get a plane after it is ordered. So few of the '51 orders, and none of those scheduled for the current fiscal year, are yet in production. Plane purchases are a fat fourth of the entire major procurement program.

The same thing is true of Army tanks. Many have been ordered, few produced. And the Navy's buildup is still largely on paper as far as industrial aspects are concerned. Congressional and defense leaders are more inclined to increase the tempo of the buildup than they are to slow down, and they think the United States public will go along. Whether Allies will get worried and start leaning toward Moscow policy is the big question.

GETTING LATE: The American jet engine industry is at least six months behind schedule. That is the estimate of Adm. Dewitt C. Ramsey, president of the Aircraft Industries Association. Ramsey recently noted in the association's official publication that materials

If the investigations into Communism are only to pillory individuals, to smash reputations, to gain political advantage, they have no valid purpose. Those who refer to them as "witch-hunting" would then be correct.

The purpose of the two congressional committees engaged in this work and of a small group of individuals who have devoted years to it is more profound. They are seeking the pattern of the use of our own sons and daughters by a foreign country to destroy the character and strength of our nation. Alger Hiss is in prison, but neither his trials nor all the studies of his case have produced an explanation of how a person of such background and education and opportunities for service could become a foreign agent.

Elizabeth Bentley, in her book "Out Of Bondage," gives us something of the pattern and it is therefore a valuable and interesting contribution to the subject. The point must be made that without such ex-Communists as Elizabeth Bentley, those who are studying this problem would still be groping in the realm of theory. Only insiders can tell us what really happened in their time.

The case of Louis Budenz is particularly important as he was in a key position to know most things that happened because he, as editor of the Daily Worker, had it as his job to give the line to other Communists, to indicate who was to be favored, who was to be attacked and smeared. For instance, while Budenz was editor of the Daily Worker, I was usually called a Japanese agent and spy, which was untrue, altogether without any basis, but nonetheless the Communist method of damaging my reputation.

Since Budenz has broken with the party, he has been of tremendous service to this country by testifying before courts and congressional committees and for the FBI. He has testified that during the last five years, he has devoted approximately 3,000 hours to the FBI alone.

He was the first witness at the trial of the 11 Communists in Judge Medina's court, on the stand 10 days, laying the foundation for that successful trial. His data stood up in the deportation proceedings against John Santo and J. Peters, leading Soviet espionage agents. He established the guilt of Gerhart Eisler. He exposed the International Workers Order and has now been testifying before the McCarran committee.

Thus far, Budenz's data, although often attacked, has never been defeated. It has been suggested that there has been a conflict between his testimony before the Tydings and the McCarran committees. This is not true. The Tydings committee was antagonistic to Budenz and would not question him adequately. In other words, a witness can only answer questions; if the questions are not asked, the answers cannot be forthcoming.

When Budenz was editor of the Daily Worker his major task was to inform the comrades and their stooges as to "the line." Every time the line twisted, it was his task to delineate the twist. He, himself, has defined the line as follows:

shortages are causing considerable worry in the airplane industry. The Admiral referred to efforts of H. R. Boyer as chairman of the newly-created Aircraft Production Board to relieve the machine tool shortage, and declared: "The problems are enormous. Mr. Boyer estimates that jet engine manufacturers alone could use entire output of the nation's machine tool production capacity."

Ramsey estimated from Boyer's figures that even with maximum aid and incentives offered by government, deliveries of machine tools to the industry will not be significant for at least another 10 months.

EXPLOITING A VICTORY—Look for the U. S. to make every effort to exploit the victory scored over Russia at the Japanese Peace treaty conference. Secretary of State Dean Acheson, in his recent Washington conferences with British Foreign Secretary Herbert Morrison and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, impressed upon them the fact that the free world now is well on the way toward winning the cold war.

It was made clear in the North Atlantic Foreign Ministers' Ottawa meeting that an increasingly tough attitude toward Russia can be adopted. Clear indication of the new policy has come in U. S. measures against the Czech Communist regime in General Matthew Ridgway's stern handling of the situation arising from the stalled truce talks in Korea, and in the decision to give West Germany virtual sovereignty. Recent statements by President Truman and members of Congress about "fantastic" new U. S. weapons of awesome destructive power are viewed as part of the "get tough" program. Meanwhile, the Kremlin is showing signs of worry—reflected in part in reports that Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary may soon be taken into the Soviet Union.

RIFLES—The big secret about the hurried Washington conference by defense heads from Britain, Canada and France has leaked out.

The Big Four nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were in a dither over a new rifle that Britain announced it had developed.

Since one of the big objectives of the NATO is arms standardization, the other members wanted to see for themselves and to determine what effect it would have on the standardization program.

At it turned out, the new British rifle differs greatly from those generally in use in the U. S., Canada and France. But despite protests from these three nations, Britain apparently is determined to go ahead with its production.

Amino Acids Essential For Keeping Up Body's Proteins

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

PROTEINS are essential to life. They are necessary not only for the structure of cells and tissues, but also for many of the body's processes and functions.

For instance, the enzymes, which regulate such processes as digestion, are composed of proteins. The same is true of the hormones which govern dozens of basic activities. Even the antibodies, or disease-resisting factors in the blood, are protein and the same substances play a major role in regulating the body's fluid balance. In addition, proteins are the body's only source of nitrogen, another essential for life.

Amino Acids

Now, while the human body can manufacture an almost endless variety of proteins, it can only do so when given an abundant supply of their constituent parts—the amino acids. These it cannot make; hence, the body must be furnished with them in the form of food.

Both animal and vegetable foods contain proteins, but they are not equally valuable because some of them contain only a few of the 10 amino acids which are indispensable to human life. The proteins found in eggs, milk, and meat are excellent in that they contain the full array of essential amino acids.

Premature Infant's Need

The premature infant's need for protein is especially pressing, since such babies are underdeveloped and must rapidly make good the deficiencies which exist at birth.

In a study made it was found that premature infants receiving a high protein diet which did not contain sufficient amounts of vitamin C or ascorbic acid had a specific slowness of growth, due to a lack of two of the essential amino acids. Premature infants fed a high protein diet not containing vitamin C excreted large amounts of the two essential amino acids in their urine. This caused slowness of growth and lack of normal development of the small infant.

ACTH Tried

It is sometimes difficult to give vitamin C in adequate amounts to premature infants. Therefore, other substances have been tried. It was found that ACTH, given in adequate dosage over a sufficient period of time, abolished the defect in the utilization of certain amino acids. However, ACTH had to be administered over a more prolonged period of time than vitamin C or ascorbic acid to counteract this difficulty.

It would be advisable to see that premature infants receive an adequate amount of vitamin C in order to maintain protein metabolism. If this is impossible, the use of ACTH should be considered.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"I WANT a drink!" Joan exclaimed as the game wore on toward its conclusion. "They're not going to score now, not possibly. Thirty yards and only three minutes. Come on, Ramsay, let's all get out of here ahead of the jam. I want a drink."

Anne, who had turned again to look at the field, cried ruefully, "Off side! Ten yards. It's larceny. That referee stole the game from us—he absolutely stole it!"

"He absolutely did," agreed Ramsay, grunting to his feet and shaking down his coat. "Come along, gals. Mamma's getting her dander up."

"Aren't we going to wait for Tony?" Ellen asked faintly.

"After that massacre?" screamed Joan. "The coach will have those poor kids on the pen till midnight. Not a chance. Even Tony had lead in his pants today."

"Too hot. Too hot for football," Ramsay stood aside to let the three of them pass. "Too bad, kids. I was hoping you'd see a real game."

"I had fun anyway," Anne Blayde said cheerfully. "I had a wonderful time."

"Don't kid the old man," teased Ramsay. "It was assault and battery from the first gun. They were too heavy—not a man of 'em under two hundred."

"They were fast, though," Anne insisted. "They were awfully fast to be so heavy."

"Alibi gals!" Ramsay held Ellen's arm going down the steep steps, with Joan and Anne skipping lightly ahead of them. "You must have put a hex on Tony, Ellen—he was dead on his feet today."

Yesterday Tony had been a hero, Ellen was thinking; today he was in the discard. They weren't even going to wait for him after all the plans they had made on Sunday.

Joan was raucously eager, once they were in the car. "The Greenbriar, Ramsay, and step on it! The place will be mobbed if we don't hurry."

"I'll drive, if you don't mind, my dear," Ramsay said frigidly.

The Greenbriar Inn was a roaring bedlam inside. Off to the left Ellen saw a crowded bar. Joan headed for it immediately. "Get a table, Ramsay, and look after the kids," she ordered. "I'll be along."

As few of the guests were interested in eating yet, Ramsay found a table promptly, without excessive bribery, and pulled out chairs for Ellen and Anne with a gallant flourish. "We'll order first, then you two can go and powder your noses," he said. "The service is always slow here."

In the powder room Anne Blayde turned anxious eyes on Ellen. "I wish I hadn't come with them," she said unhappily. "My mother didn't want me to come. Are you in love with Tony Ricco? Joan said you were."

"My heavens!" Ellen turned from the mirror, lipstick in air. "I barely know Tony. I danced with him once in Florida, and he came to see me Sunday. Joan gets some very weird ideas."

"I didn't know," Anne ran a comb through her yellow fluff of hair. "Tony is the type girls always go mad over."

"We could slip out and take a taxi," Ellen suggested. "I can't be terribly late getting back—my mother's so sick and she worries."

"I didn't bring much money," Anne looked dubiously into her purse. "Only eighty cents. We could go on the bus but it's a long walk to the bus line."

"We'll tell them quite firmly that we must leave immediately after dinner," Ellen said in a tone faintly reminiscent of her mother.

"I don't think firmness goes very far with Joan Iglehart."

Presently Anne was off, threatening her way through the tables. Ellen saw the man get to his feet, very brown and tall, and stand smiling at her. Then the two came back, and Anne, a youthful excitement shining in her eyes, introduced him.

"This is my friend Jim Elliot, Ellen. Miss Fowler, Jim, Ellen Fowler."

Elliot bowed. "I've met your father, Miss Fowler. I'll be delighted to take you both back to town."

Ellen flushed. "It's... my mother is ill, Mr. Elliot... and we came with the Igleharts and they'll probably stay late."

Rosemary Mace, Walter Bumgarner Jr. Are Wed

Before an altar setting of palms and baskets of white gladioli and carnations, flanked by lighted tapers in candelabra, Miss Rosemary Mace became the bride of Walter Bumgarner Jr.

The ceremony was performed Sept. 22 by the Rev. Warren Bumgarner of Toledo, brother of the bridegroom, and the Rev. Robert Weaver in Circleville First Methodist church at 3:30 p. m.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mace of Circleville Route 3, given in marriage by her father, was wearing a gown of white bridal satin fashioned with a long cathedral train. The moulded bodice was designed with rows of tiny pearls outlining the neckline of the dress and long fitted sleeves which came to points over the hands. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was draped from a beaded pearl tiara and her flowers were a cascaded bouquet of white carnations with a clustered center of tuberoses. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace.

Miss Ona Margaret Hurtt of Clarksburg, maid of honor was wearing a gown of orchid taffeta fashioned with a bustle of orchid net. Matching mitts and head-dress completed the costume. Her flowers were an arrangement of orchid pom-poms and she wore a pearl choker and earrings.

Kenneth Bumgarner of Wilmington served his brother as best man and guests were seated by Willard Bumgarner of Rochester, N. Y., another brother of the bridegroom, William Davis of Washington C. H., and Franklin J. and Jim D. Mace, brothers of the bride.

A program of pre-nuptial music was played by Mrs. Ervin Leist at the organ and vocal selections were sung by Mrs. Dudley Carpenter.

The home of the bride's parents was decorated throughout with vases of cut flowers for the reception which followed the ceremony.

For her wedding trip to the Southern states the new Mrs. Bumgarner changed to a gray suit with black and white accessories. She was wearing the tuberoses which centered her bridal bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of Jackson Township high school and is employed in Columbus. The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bumgarner of Washington C. H., was also graduated by Jackson Township high school and is attending Ohio State university where he is a member of Alpha Gamma Sigma fraternity.

NUMBER ONE JOB

Today, your telephone company's Number One job is to help keep America secure. The people of Ohio and the nation depend upon the telephone to get things done. Now that their country is once again building up its military and industrial might for defense, they are finding urgent jobs for the telephone to do. They are calling on the telephone to speed production, to expedite mobilization, to spread warning against attack, and to bolster morale all along the line.

On top of this, they are using the telephone more than ever before in their business and social lives; there is no letup in new civilian demand. But the company must be financially strong if it is to help make the State and nation strong. Its financial strength, like that of all businesses, depends upon its ability to obtain the money it needs to do the job. To do this, our company must have high enough earnings so that people with money to invest will want to invest it in telephone securities.

In other words, the company must earn well if it is to serve well. That is why we have requested an increase in our rates.

Mrs. A. J. Lyle Hosts Cara Club

Sixteen members of Portsmouth Cara Club, including Mrs. Fred Clark of South Court street, were entertained Tuesday with a covered-dish dinner by Mrs. A. J. Lyle in her West Mound street home.

Other guests from Circleville were Mrs. George Adkins of East Main street and the Misses Martha and Bertha Warner, of West Mound street.

Rosemary Mace, Walter Bumgarner Jr. Are Wed

Before an altar setting of palms and baskets of white gladioli and carnations, flanked by lighted tapers in candelabra, Miss Rosemary Mace became the bride of Walter Bumgarner Jr.

The ceremony was performed Sept. 22 by the Rev. Warrey Bumgarner of Toledo, brother of the bridegroom, and the Rev. Robert Weaver in Circleville First Methodist church at 3:30 p. m.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mace of Circleville Route 3, given in marriage by her father, was wearing a gown of white bridal satin fashioned with a long cathedral train. The moulded bodice was designed with rows of tiny pearls outlining the neckline of the dress and long fitted sleeves which came to points over the hands. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was draped from a beaded pearl tiara and her flowers were a cascaded bouquet of white carnations with a clustered center of tuberoses. Her only jewelry was a pearl necklace.

Miss Ona Margaret Hurt of Clarksburg, maid of honor was wearing a gown of orchid taffeta fashioned with a bustle of orchid net. Matching mitts and head-dress completed the costume. Her flowers were an arrangement of orchid pom-poms and she wore a pearl choker and earrings.

Kenneth Bumgarner of Wilmington served his brother as best man and guests were seated by Willard Bumgarner of Rochester, N. Y., another brother of the bridegroom, William Davis of Washington C. H., and Franklin J. and Jim D. Mace, brothers of the bride. A program of pre-nuptial music was played by Mrs. Ervin Leist at the organ and vocal selections were sung by Mrs. Dudley Carpenter.

The home of the bride's parents was decorated throughout with vases of cut flowers for the reception which followed the ceremony.

The lace-covered bridal table was centered with the traditional wedding cake. Acting as hostesses for the reception were Mrs. Franklin Mace, Mrs. William Dennis, Mrs. Donald Walliser of Lancaster and Miss Eleanor Bumgarner of Washington C. H.

Mrs. Mace received her guests wearing a dress of gray crepe trimmed in rose with a hat of the same shade. Mrs. Bumgarner was also wearing gray crepe with black velvet accents and accessories. Both wore white carnation corsages.

Ex-Denver Grid Player Claims Salary Is Unpaid

DENVER, Sept. 29—The Colorado Industrial Commission is to hear the case of an ex-Denver university football player who claims the school owes him $26 for salary he lost while recovering from a 1950 Spring practice back injury.

The former gridder, 24-year-old Ernest E. Nemeth, said—in the claim filed with the commission—that he is entitled to the week's pay from the university because the injury was sustained while he was engaged in athletic activity. The university has denied paying Nemeth or any other student for engaging in athletics.

The case has drawn national interest because of possible repercussions at other universities. Representatives from inter-collegiate Athletic Associations are expected to sit in on the hearing.

George VanCamp To Have A Talk With His Horse

"I'm gonna have a talk with that horse."

That was Circleville's George W. VanCamp talking about his big stallion pacer, Air Pilot.

Called by telephone Saturday morning, a newsman was advised by VanCamp that the owner had not been at Lebanon Raceway Friday night to see Air Pilot in the feature attraction.

Van Camp was advised that Air Pilot had won, but that no particulars were available other than that Lou Huber Jr. had driven Air Pilot to victory.

"Well, that's good news. Now, maybe I won't take him (Air Pilot) to Lexington after all."

VanCamp explained that he was planning to truck a couple of his horses to the Kentucky city next week to the annual sales and that he was "tinkering" with the idea of taking Air Pilot along to the auction block.

But after Friday night's showing, Van Camp didn't know about that latter idea.

"Will you talk with Huber on that, George?"

The local reinsman paused, then drawled:

"Shucks, no; I'll talk to the horse. He may consider himself eligible for a pension and I'll have to keep him."

Saddler-Pep Go Being Probed

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—Newly-appointed chairman Bob Christenberry of the New York State Athletic Commission wrestled with his first problem today, an investigation of the Sandy Saddler-Willie Pep featherweight title fight.

The bout, which Saddler won Wednesday night when Pep retired to leave his stool after the ninth round, was one of the most foul-filled contests ever seen in a New York ring.

Hapless Indians Appreciate Loyal Efforts Of Fans

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29.—Although the Cleveland Indians could not reward some loyal 35,000 fans with tickets to the World Series, they did the next Series tickets a pair of ducats to a game next season.

As the New York Yankees clinched the American League pennant for the third straight time, the Indians' management announced almost simultaneously that it would give each person who thought enough of the Tribe's chances to order World Series tickets a pair of ducats to a game next season.

"That's only fair after all," said Nate Wallack, Indians' promotion head. "These people went to the trouble of getting bank checks or certifying their own checks and mailing them in. This is to show our appreciation."

Mauling Motley May Get Boot From Browns

BOYES SPRINGS, Cal., Sept. 29.—Little Frankie Albert and Big Marion Motley will be "on the spot" Sunday when the Cleveland Browns clash with the San Francisco 49ers—but for different reasons.

Albert, the daring, shifty quarterback of the 49ers, is the man the Browns must stop if they hope to open a successful defense of their 1950 National Football League crown.

"Motley must produce against the 49ers and the Rams or we'll have to let him go."

ANOTHER WORRY OF Browns is the age of his defense

"We're a year older and we haven't added much in that time. We'll just have to get away to a good start this season and that means beating the 49ers Sunday."

"Keep your eye on Albert. He's playing better than ever and the 49ers have a strong defense."

George VanCamp To Have A Talk With His Horse

"I'm gonna have a talk with that horse."

That was Circleville's George V. VanCamp talking about his big stallion pacer, Air Pilot.

Called by telephone Saturday morning, a newsmen was advised by VanCamp that the owner had not been at Lebanon Raceway Friday night to see Air Pilot go in the feature attraction.

VanCamp was advised that Air Pilot had won, but that no particulars were available other than that Lou Huber Jr. had driven Air Pilot to victory.

"Well, that's good news. Now, maybe I won't take him (Air Pilot) to Lexington after all."

VanCamp explained that he was planning to truck a couple of his horses to the Kentucky city next week to the annual sales and that he was "tinkering" with the idea of taking Air Pilot along to the auction block.

But after Friday night's showing, VanCamp didn't know about that latter idea.

"Will you talk with Huber on that, George?"

The local reinsman paused, then drawled:

"Shucks, no; I'll talk to the horse. He may consider himself eligible for a pension and I'll have to keep him."

Veek Planning Twin Baseball-Basketball Bill

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 29.—Unpredictable Bill Veek, president of the St. Louis Browns, today planned a new wrinkle to boost box office receipts—this time for charity.

The former Cleveland baseball entrepreneur has scheduled a baseball-basketball double-header at Sportsman's Park for Sunday.

On the bill is a basketball game featuring the famed Harlem Globetrotters against an "All-Star" team composed of nationally famed players and supplemented by members of the baseball Browns.

After the cage tilt, the portable basketball floor will be removed from the diamond and the Browns will get down to business in their season finale against the Chicago White Sox.

Grid Scores

Being Probed

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The newly appointed chairman of the Board of Athletic Commission was today being investigated by the Senate for his first problem to solve: the investigation of the Sandor Ferencz-Willie Pep featherweight fight.

The bout, which Saddler was scheduled to referee Wednesday night when he refused to leave his stool after the first round, was one of the foulest fights ever seen in a New York ring.

REYNOLDS GAINS HONOR
Yankees Clinch AL Flag
As Bums Fume And Fumble

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 - Charley Dressen, distraught manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has summed up the National League pennant race today in one tortured sentence: "The only trouble with us is that we're playing .500 ball while the New York Giants are playing .900 ball."

It was a statement that might almost have kissed the pennant goodbye for the Dodgers. While the New York Yankees were irrevocably clinching the American League Flag, the Dodgers finished the process yesterday of dissipating a 13-2 game lead.

It took drama of the sheerest sort to top Allie Reynolds' second hitless game of the season for the Yanks—making him the first American Leaguer to hurl two in one season—as the Yanks defeated Boston, 8 to 0 and 11 to 3.

BUT THE DRAMA was packed into a ninth-inning single by Willie Jones that skipped past Third Base Phil Coss's glove to give Philadelphia an uphill 4-to-3 win over the Dodgers last night and throw Brooklyn into a tie with the Giants.

The Brooks gave Carl Erskine, seeking his 17th win, a 3-to-0 lead in the first five innings in an assault climaxed by Roy Campanella's 33rd homerun.

But Erskine couldn't hold it.

He gave up an apparently harmless tally in the sixth and was touched for a two-run homer by Andy Seminick in the eighth.

In the ninth, Richie Ashburn dropped a hit in short left. Dick Sisler sacrificed and Dressen, playing the book to the hilt, ordered Bill Nicholson passed. But Jones—who already had a double and single—skipped another hit past Cox.

Ashburn, one of the fastest men in the league, scored easily to throw the race into a tie.

THE GIANTS, for the second straight day, merely had to sit idly by while the Dodgers faded in the stretch.

With two games apiece to go, the Giants have well-rested Sal Maglie and Larry Jansen, both 20-game winners, to throw against Boston today and tomorrow.

Dressen, on the other hand, must come back tonight with Don Newcombe, who pitched Wednesday and seldom goes well on less than three days' rest. Sunday it is anybody's guess—probably Preacher Roe, another guy who needs pampering, or unpredictable Ralph Branca.

The Yankees clinched their 18th pennant in true Yankee style.

As if Reynolds' spectacular no-hitter (he allowed four walks) were't enough, they gave one of their finest power displays of the year in the second game.

Seven Yankee runs—the second highest one-inning total of the season—crossed the plate in the second. And in the sixth, Joe DiMaggio climaxed the day with a three-run homer.

Elsewhere in the majors, they first went through the motions. Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh, 4 to 3, in the National League. In the American, Chicago beat St. Louis twice, 6 to 2 and 4 to 3.

"I mean the Communist viewpoint at that particular moment, the Communist objective. This has nothing to do fundamentally with the Communist philosophy, except that it is an expression of it in action during a period of me. And that had to be emphasized in the Daily Worker, not merely as to what the line was but as to its various delicate nuances, if I may use that term. The Daily Worker is not a daily paper in the normal sense of the word. It is the telegraph agency of the conspiracy giving directives to the conspirators."

Very often, we hear the phrases, "front organization" or "fronts." This has confused many people who became members of what they believed were good causes and who eventually discover that they are being accused of having been part of the international Communist conspiracy. Their usual excuse is that they did not know. Sometimes, it is hard to believe that they did not understand what they were doing. Yet, it could be.

Buden, testifying before the McCarran committee, defined these organizations:

"We have to distinguish according to the Communist parlance between captive organizations and fronts. Communist fronts are those created by the Communist Party itself. Captive organizations are those penetrated successfully and taken over. That is to say, the policies are under control of the party, although not necessarily all the personnel is."

The international Communist movement is a conspiracy designed to achieve world domination by Soviet Russia. Front and captive organizations are used as devices.

Betty Badger
Emerson Brice
Rites Are Read

Vases of white carnations and pom-poms reflecting the light from tall tapers in three-tiered candelabra formed the altar setting in St. Paul's Lutheran church, Sept. 14, when Miss Betty Lou Badger became the bride of Emerson Brice Connell.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Badger of Ashville and the bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brice Connell of Derby, were united in marriage by the Rev. E. H. Winterhoff in a double-ring ceremony at 7:30 p. m.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was wearing a street length gown of white embroidered net over white taffeta, with white accessories. Her veil fell from a white hat set with rhinestones and she carried a white Bible clustered with an arrangement of carnations.

Mrs. Ben Temple served her sister as matron of honor. She wore a gown of mint-green or-gandy over green taffeta, with white accessories. Her flowers were salmon carnations. Brother of the bridegroom, Roger Connell of Derby, was best man.

Nuptial music was played on the organ by Mrs. Charles McCray and several vocal selections were sung by Mrs. Charles Morrison.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents for members of the families and close friends. The candle lighted bridal table was centered with a tiered wedding cake.

Mrs. Badger received her guests in a gown of green crepe with black accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of yellow pom-poms.

Mrs. Connell was wearing a costume of brown crepe with brown accessories and a red carnation corsage.

The new Mrs. Connell changed to a blue suit with brown accessories for her wedding trip to the Southern states. She was wearing her bridal flowers as a shoulder corsage.

The bride was graduated by Ashville high school with the class of 1951 and is employed in Ashville. The bridegroom is a graduate of Derby high school and is employed in Columbus.

On their return the couple will reside with the Bride's parents.

Trio Of New Families
Bring Deep South To City

A trio of new families, part of the group coming from Barksdale Airbase in Louisiana to Lockbourne, has recently moved to the city. And all of them bring a touch of the deep South with their delightful accents.

Circleville folks will find, when talking with their new neighbors in these accents: a difference especially noticeable between the Texas drawl of Mrs. William Brosom, that of T-Sgt. and Mrs. Howard Parson who are natives of Alabama and the acquired accent of Mrs. D. J. Holder who although born and raised in the neighboring village of Millport, has lived in several Southern states so long that she no longer talks like a "Yankee."

Lt. and Mrs. William Brosom and their children, William 8, Ann Louise 6 and Erwin, eight months old, moved to 205 1-2 South Pickaway street a month ago—that is, Mrs. Brosom and the children did, for Lt. Brosom is still "commuting" between Lockbourne and Barksdale, supervising the moving of planes and equipment.

Mrs. Brosom was born in Cisco, Texas, near Dallas and her husband in Decatur, Ill. They spent 22 months in Germany where they acquired several pieces of very distinctive furniture which Mrs. Brosom had made to her own specifications, ultra-modern pieces in plastic which fit in very well with the newly-completed apartment.

Mrs. Brosom expressed the hope that her husband would soon be at Lockbourne permanently. She said, "A few days ago, I spent hours on the telephone trying to call him in Louisiana. And while I was still at the telephone he walked in the front door."

She also hopes that there will be no more moving—at least, for a while.

T-Sgt. and Mrs. Parson moved to 214 1-2 East Main street Sept. 1, but had been living at Lockbourne Airbase for three weeks before that until their Circleville apartment was ready for them.

The Parsons—Carolyn and Howard—both born and raised in Birmingham, Ala., are still newly-weds. They were married last December, a few days after he received a B.S. degree in electrical engineering from Alabama Polytechnic Institute in Auburn. He is also a graduate of University of Alabama and served in both India and China during World War II.

Mrs. Parson loves meeting new people and for that reason enjoys her work at Pickaway Arms where she has been employed for the last three weeks.

She also has another interest—interior decorating and is busy engaged in furnishing her new apartment, seeking "just the right pieces of furniture" for her new home.

In addition to their work the young couple enjoys reading and study, especially as it applies to their church for they are both Christian Scientists.

O. E. Bumgarner
Is Honored On
86th Birthday

O. E. Bumgarner was honored on his 86th birthday anniversary when his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bumgarner of Ashville entertained with a family picnic dinner in their home.

Those present for the affair were: Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bumgarner of Hawkinsville, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Bumgarner and daughters of Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bumgarner of Washington C. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bumgarner and son of Wilmington; Mr. and Mrs. Don Waliser and son of Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. William Share and family, Miss Eleanor Bumgarner and Earl Campbell of Columbus;

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Lockbaum and son and Mrs. Mary Sheets of Circleville; Miss Mary Partee and Miss Wilda Stover of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Carle and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Walker and family and Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Bumgarner of Circleville Route 2; Richard and Carl Bumgarner of the home; the honored guest and the hosts.

On their return to the states, they went first to Sumpter, S.C.; then to Albany, Ga.; from there to Barksdale, and finally, for Betty Holder, home to Pickaway County.

With three children, Mrs. Holder has very little time for outside activities, but she does enjoy club work and plans to attend meetings of Officers Wives Club, an organization now being formed at the Airbase.

Although the Holders, like many neighbors to the South, are Baptists, they have friends in Circleville who are Presbyterians and they plan to attend services in that church.

Yankees Clinch AL Flag As Bums Fume And Fumble

NEW YORK, Sept. 29 — Charley Dressen, distraught manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, has summed up the National League pennant race today in one tortured sentence:

"The only trouble with us is that we're playing .500 ball while the New York Giants are playing .900 ball."

It was a statement that might almost have kissed the pennant goodbye for the Dodgers. While the New York Yankees were irrevocably clinching the American League Flag, the Dodgers finished the process yesterday of dissipating a 13 1-2 game lead.

It took drama of the sheerest sort to top Allie Reynolds' second hitless game of the season for the Yanks—making him the first American Leaguer to hurl two in one season—as the Yanks defeated Boston, 8 to 0 and 11 to 3.

BUT THE DRAMA was packed into a ninth-inning single by Willie Jones that skipped past Third Baseman Billy Cox's glove to give Philadelphia an uphill 4-to-3 win over the Dodgers last night and throw Brooklyn into a tie with the Giants.

The Brooks gave Carl Erskine, seeking his 17th win, a 3-to-0 lead in the first five innings in an assault climaxed by Roy Campanella's 33rd homerun.

But Erskine couldn't hold it.

He gave up an apparently harmless tally in the sixth and was touched for a two-run homer by Andy Seminick in the eighth.

The Yankees clinched their 18th pennant in true Yankee style.

Jury To Probe Gambling Cases

MT. VERNON, Sept. 29 — The Knox County grand jury will convene Thursday to investigate gambling conditions in Mt. Vernon and the county.

Common Pleas Judge Jay S. McDevitt set the date yesterday for the probe which resulted from a series of rapid raids over the weekend.

Four of the 28 persons arrested in the raids have been bound over to the grand jury on charges based on the new state law which makes display, possession or transportation of a slot machine a felony.

The raids followed an investigation sponsored by a 25-member citizen's committee.

Trio Of New Families Bring Deep South To City

A trio of new families, part of the group coming from Barksdale Airbase in Louisiana to Lockbourne, has recently moved to the city. And all of them bring a touch of the deep South with their delightful accents.

Circleville folks will find, when talking with their new neighbors that there is quite a difference in these accents; a difference especially noticeable between the Texas drawl of Mrs. William Brosom, that of T-Sgt. and Mrs. Howard Parson who are natives of Alabama and the acquired accent of Mrs. D. J. Holder who although born and raised in the neighboring village of Millport, has lived in several Southern states so long that she no longer talks like a "Yankee."

Lt. and Mrs. William Brosom and their children, William 8, Ann Louise 6 and Erwin, eight months old, moved to 205 1-2 South Pickaway street a month ago—that is, Mrs. Brosom and the children did, for Lt. Brosom is still "commuting" between Lockbourne and Barksdale, supervising the moving of planes and equipment.

Mrs. Brosom was born in Cisco, Texas, near Dallas and her husband in Decatur, Ill. They spent 22 months in Germany where they acquired several pieces of very distinctive furniture which Mrs. Brosom had made to her own specifications, ultra-modern pieces in plastic which fit in very well with the newly-completed apartment.

Mrs. Brosom expressed the hope that her husband would soon be at Lockbourne permanently. She said, "A few days ago, I spent hours on the telephone trying to call him in Louisiana. And while I was still at the telephone he walked in the front door."

She also hopes that there will be no more moving—at least, for a while.

Sgt. and Mrs. Parson moved to 214 1-2 East Main street Sept. 1, but had been living at Lockbourne Airbase for three weeks before that until their Circleville apartment was ready for them.

The Parsons—Carolyn and Howard—both born and raised in Birmingham, Ala., are still new-weds. They were married last December, a few days after he received a B.S. degree in electrical engineering from Alabama Polytechnic Institute in Auburn. He is also a graduate of University of Alabama and served in both India and China during World War II.

Mrs. Parson loves meeting new people and for that reason enjoys her work at Pickaway Arms where she has been employed for the last three weeks.

She also has another interest—interior decorating and is busily engaged in furnishing her new apartment, seeking "just the right pieces of furniture" for her new home.

In addition to their work the young couple enjoys reading and study, especially as it applies to their church for they are both Christian Scientists.

6 Czech Slave Miners Escape To West Germany

HOF, Germany, Sept. 29—Six Czech uranium miners escaped into West Germany yesterday in the first flight directly attributed to the "freedom balloon" messages floated by the West into Communist-ruled Czechoslovakia.

The miners from the dreaded "slave labor" pits at Joachimsthal in Bohemia being exploited for the Soviet war machine surrendered to German border police near Hof at dawn today.

The group was headed by Joseph Prokop and Antoin Reha.

The men said their escape was prompted by the balloon messages floated into their homeland by the "Crusade for Freedom" organization.

They also said that news of the Czech engineer's daring train flight into Western Germany sanctuary recently helped make up their minds to escape.

PROKOP AND Reha said that 3,000 former German army troops, including elite SS members, still are among the labor gangs mining uranium at Joachimsthal.

The six fleeing miners arrived in Germany just as the "Crusade for Freedom" organization prepared to float thousands of additional balloons carrying messages of hope to people in the former Democratic Czechoslovakian republic.

In the new launching, Czech refugees among the 32 who escaped on the Czech "freedom train" will participate.

Communist authorities have reacted violently to the Western balloon propaganda campaign financed by the private organization sponsored by American contributions.

The "Crusade for Freedom" organization said recently it received information that the Czech Communist regime sent up eight planes bearing Russian markings with instructions to the pilots to shoot down the balloons.

The balloons, 2,000 of them, first were floated from West Germany eastward into Czechoslovakia Aug. 13, a little more than six weeks before the escape of the Czech uranium miners.

POLAND, another Soviet satellite, was added as a target for the balloons.

A total of 10,000 balloons carrying nine million messages have been floated eastward.

The leaflets scattered by the balloons have contained messages saying in part:

"A new wind is blowing, a new hope is stirring. Friends of freedom in other lands have found a new way to reach you. Tyranny cannot control the winds, cannot control your heart. Freedom will rise again."

80 Dope Agents Rounded Up In Northern Ohio

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29—Northern Ohio police and federal narcotics agents today are holding some 80 dope peddlers and a drug wholesaler nabbed in round-the-clock raids in Cleveland, Akron, Canton and Youngstown.

One of the big men in the drug ring, which amounts to an estimated $5 million business, is the manager of a saloon on Cleveland's east side, according to narcotic agents. He was corralled along with some 65 dope peddlers in the Cleveland area.

Sgt. Louis Kopacka, head of the Cleveland police drug squad, said another 15 or more were rounded up in Akron, Canton and Youngstown.

The actual number of persons expected to be indicted before a federal grand jury from tomorrow on was put at 55 by Kopacka.

Joseph Bell, district federal drug agent, called the roundup of drug peddlers and distributors "the biggest ever to hit Northern Ohio" and tagged Cleveland as "one of the largest drug distribution centers in the nation."

Postal Units Use Old Depot

CLEVELAND, Sept. 29—The old freight depot in downtown Cleveland will become the special delivery section of the city's main postoffice beginning Monday.

Postmaster Joseph F. Prosser said traffic congestion around the main postoffice is forcing the transfer to the former freight depot. He said that anyone receiving a card telling him to call for his undelivered mail at the special delivery section should go to the annex and not the main post office.

Cowboys 'Feud' In New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—Two hundred feuding cowboys, with bucking broncos, Brahma bulls and spirited calves, have taken over Madison Square Garden for the 26th annual world's championship rodeo.

Three Million Ohioans Ready To Change Time

COLUMBUS, Sept. 29—Ohio's perennial clock confusion period ends when Daylight Saving Time bows out at 2 a. m. Sunday.

Nearly three million residents in the northeast section of the state will regain the hour they "lost" in the early morning of April 29, when the switch to "fast time" was made.

To get back into-step with the rest of the state, the daylight area residents will have to move their clocks back one hour.

The switch will mean more daylight in the early hours, a boon to mothers sending their children to school, and, vice versa, earlier nightfall, a boon to theater operators.

The daylight saving area includes most cities north and east

Wesleyan Total Down By 3 Pct.

DELAWARE, Sept. 29—Prof. Allen C. Conger, Ohio Wesleyan university registrar, announced today that the university suffered only a three percent drop in enrollment as compared to the ten percent predicted for colleges in general this year.

Man, 74, Walks 2,500 Miles To Rejoin Sister

DETROIT, Sept. 29—A bearded, penniless, 74-year-old man, claiming to have walked all the way from Stockton, Calif., to Detroit, today began trying to locate a sister in the motor city.

He is Julius Shelbech, who arrived in town Wednesday and told police the 2,500-mile trek took seven months, without a ride, because "I prefer to walk."

Officers took him and his small bundle of belongings to Wayne County general hospital for a night's lodgings because he had no money.

Shelbech said that handouts and odd-job money provided him with subsistence during his cross-country hike and that he was often given lodgings in police stations.

The short, stocky old man said he left Detroit for Stockton in 1914.

He gave police the last known address of his sister, Tofilia, who would be about 70. He said he had last heard from her 17 years ago.

This Is Time To Spray Fence Row, Experts Say

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—Agriculture Department specialists say Fall is the best time of the year for spray-killing the brush-type weeds along fence rows, borders of fields, ditch banks and similar locations.

During the growing season it may not be advisable to spray near fields where crops are sensitive to the weed-killers.

But Fall application reduces the hazard of crop injury, and the effect will have vanished before the fields are put to crop production the next season.

The specialists say sprays of 2,4-D or 2,4,5-T or mixtures of the two will kill the roots of oak, cherry, willow or other woody plants when applied in oil-water sprays.

New Sanitation Course Pondered

Circleville board of health may be asked to institute a course in sanitation in local schools.

C. O. Leist, Circleville health commissioner, said Friday he is considering making the request to the health board. He said the idea was derived from a discussion of sanitation problems during a meeting of health officers from throughout Ohio in Columbus.

Leist explained that the course would be for the long-run benefit of the city.

Firemen were called to the scene but Alan was dead on their arrival. Firemen said there were burns on the child's mouth.

DELAWARE, Sept. 29—Prof. Allen C. Conger, Ohio Wesleyan university registrar, announced today that the university suffered only a three percent drop in enrollment as compared to the ten percent predicted for colleges in general this year.

Conger said total registration at the Delaware campus stands at 1,983 in comparison with last year's 2,048. Boosting this year's student body, he said, is the largest freshman class in Ohio Wesleyan's 109-year history.

When the switch is made all cities in the state again will be on Eastern Standard Time.

Man, 74, Walks
2,500 Miles To Rejoin Sister

DETROIT, Sept. 29—A bearded, penniless, 74-year-old man, claiming to have walked all the way from Stockton, Calif., to Detroit, today began trying to locate a sister in the motor city.

He is Julius Shelbech, who arrived in town Wednesday and told police the 2,500-mile trek took seven months, without a ride, because "I prefer to walk."

Officers took him and his small bundle of belongings to Wayne County general hospital for a night's lodgings because he had no money.

Shelbech said that handouts and odd-job money provided him with subsistence during his cross-country hike and that he was often given lodgings in police stations.

The short, stocky old man said he left Detroit for Stockton in 1914.

He gave police the last known address of his sister, Tofilia, who would be about 70. He said he had last heard from her 17 years ago.
